THE SCRIPT II

Written by
Geoffrey Fletcher

The following screenplay contains just the dialogue and very little description. You may imagine its characters, its location(s) and its events in any inoffensive way that you wish.

You may add a scene in the middle with your own dialogue of up to 3 minutes in length. The dialogue for the beginning and end are set. The total film should be around 5 minutes in length.

Your characters can be any combination of people, creatures or objects, real or imagined. Feel free to place these characters anywhere (Earth or otherwise), in any time period (past, present or future) or in any genre (comedy, thriller or otherwise) using any style or production technique (live action, animation, photography, drawing or otherwise) that you wish to use.

When you come to enter your treatment you will be asked to enter a written overview (maximum 1000 words) and the dialogue for the central scene.

Good luck!

LOCATION (You decide where!)

CHARACTER A

We have to get out of this.

CHARACTER B

Why do you say that?

CHARACTER A

Look around.

CHARACTER B

How could this happen?

Here, in 3 minutes or less, we see how A and B got into this situation. (Remember, it's up to you. Use your imagination!)

When we return to the present...

CHARACTER A

We'll never get out.

CHARACTER B

That's what you think. Watch this!

Character B attempts something.

CHARACTER A

Don't!

We see the result of Character B's action.

CHARACTER A

Are you happy now?
